II. MINUTES

NEW HAVEN, CONN.

FIRST SESSION

Wednesday afternoon, December 27, 1922.

The Fifty-fourth Annual Meeting was called to order by the President of the Association, Professor Francis Greenleaf Allinson of Brown University, in Osborn Hall, Room A2, Yale University. The session was attended by about 135 people.

The Secretary, Professor Clarence P. Bill of Western Reserve University, reported as follows:

The publication of Volume 52 of the Transactions and Proceedings was delayed until the end of November, partly because some of the material was late in reaching the Secretary, and partly through unusual slowness at the bindery, which was being moved. The volume contains 249 pages, about 80 pages less than the average number in the half-dozen years before the war.

The financial condition of the Association has improved during the year, and its membership has continued to grow substantially. The financial improvement is due not only to the increase in membership, but largely to the contributions of members and to income from the Endowment Fund, now available for the first time. But the resources of the Association, though strengthened, are not yet such as to insure the permanent publication of a volume of satisfactory size. Enlargement and improvement of the volume are still to be provided for, and it is hoped that provision for them can be made through substantial additions to the Endowment Fund and through continued increase in membership.

The condition of the Endowment Fund, which now totals somewhat more than $10,000, will be made clear by the reports of the Endowment Committee and its Treasurer (pp. xv. f.).

The number of members has grown in the last three years from 599 to 867, an increase of 45%. A further increase to 1000 members should be an aim of the immediate future.

The Association has 867 members, distributed as follows:

Regular annual members	693
From the Philological Association of the Pacific Coast	59
Life members	93
Relieved from payment of dues because of age and length of membership ship	22
	867

The membership record for the past year is as follows:

New members	93
Reinstated	1
Transferred from the Philological Association of the Pacific Coast	3
Total gain	97
 Members lost
By death	4
By resignation	10
Dropped for failure in payment of dues	17
Loss in members from the Philological Association of the Pacific

Friday morning, December 29.

December 29, 1922.

(Signed) W. P. Woodman }
John S. Galbraith } Auditors

The report of the Committee was adopted and placed on file.

The Committee on the Place of the Next Meeting, through its Chairman, Professor Bill, recommended that the Association accept the invitation of Princeton University to hold the next meeting on the campus of that institution in conjunction with the Archaeological Institute. The recommendation was adopted.

The following resolutions, reported by the Committee on Resolutions through Professor Crosby, were then adopted:

Resolved, That we, the members of the American Philological Association, assembled at New Haven for the Fifty-fourth Annual Meeting, express to the President and Corporation of Yale University our most cordial appreciation of their generous welcome to the Association. We acknowledge also a debt of gratitude to Professor C. W. Mendell and to the other members of the Classical Faculty of the University and to their wives for the care and courtesy they have shown in providing for our comfort and pleasure. Nowhere could the Association feel more at home than in the University to which it owes in a considerable measure its origin.

Resolved, That we tender the thanks of the Association to the Graduates Club for the privilege of using its house for the smoker.

Resolved, That we express our appreciation of the kindness of the Faculty Club in opening its house for the social meeting of the women of the Association.

Resolved, That we give our thanks to the Elizabethan Club for its hospitality at the tea and for the opportunity it afforded to inspect its unique collection of books.

Resolved, That we record the Association's appreciation of the thought and care taken in our behalf by the authorities of the University Library in arranging the interesting exhibition of early printed classical books.

Resolved, That we thank the officers of the American Historical Association for their help in making the arrangements for this meeting.

Resolved, That we express the Association's appreciation of the devotion of its Secretary, Professor Clarence P. Bill, shown in his constant attention to his exacting duties, in his successful raising of a fund for the Association, and not least in attending this meeting in circumstances which more than justified his remaining at home.

The Association's Representatives on the Joint Committee on Grammatical Nomenclature, through their Chairman, Professor John C. Kirtland, reported that it has still been impossible completely to finish the work of the Committee. Further explanation was made by Professor W. G. Hale, Chairman of the Committee. The report was adopted and the representation continued.

The Endowment Committee, through its Secretary, Professor C. P. Bill, presented the following report:

Your Committee begs leave to report that the total amount paid into the Endowment Fund is $10325.85. The Committee greatly regrets that the conditions under which it had to work, particularly the general depression of business in the last two years, have prevented greater progress toward its goal of $25,000. It hopes, however, for further substantial additions to the Fund.

Ten thousand dollars of the Fund has been invested by the Treasurer in first mortgage bonds on real estate in New York City.

The Committee recommends that the following resolution, setting forth the purpose and control of the Fund, be adopted and entered on the records of the Association:

The income of the Fund shall be used to meet the cost of the publications of the Association.

Upon the retirement of the Treasurer of the Endowment Committee, who is ex officio Treasurer of the Fund, the choice of a Treasurer shall be in the hands of the Executive Committee of the Association. The investment of the Fund shall be made by the Treasurer, with the approval of the Executive Committee.

In order to safeguard the future of the Fund, it is hereby provided that in case the Association should dissolve, the management of the Fund shall reside in a Committee of Five, of which one member shall be appointed by the Classical Departments of Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Johns Hopkins, and Chicago Universities respectively; and this Committee shall devote the proceeds of the Fund to a purpose as closely allied to the original one as possible.

On motion duly made and seconded the report was adopted. The following statement, showing the condition of the Endowment Fund, and submitted by Geo. A. Plimpton, Treasurer of the Fund, was presented, in the Treasurer's absence, by the Secretary:

The President announced the appointment of Professor Walton Brooks McDaniel as a member of the Nominating Committee.

On recommendation of the Executive Committee the following resolutions were adopted :

Voted, That the amendment to the Constitution providing for an increase in dues, which was proposed at the last meeting, be laid on the table for another year.

Voted, To endorse the protest of the American Library Association against Section 6 of the bill now pending in Congress to amend the copyright law (H. R. 11476).

The President presented an invitation sent by the Classical Association of England and Wales to members of the American Philological Association to attend the coming general meeting of the former association.

Professor H. R. Fairclough, delegate of the Philological Association of the Pacific Coast, presented the following message from that Association :

At the Twenty-fourth Annual Meeting of the Philological Association of the Pacific Coast, recently held in San Francisco, a motion was carried unanimously whereby the speaker was deputed to convey to this, the parent Association, the filial and respectful greetings of her offspring in the far West. We rejoice in your continued activity and in your notable achievements, which are our inspiration and our model, and we trust that the pleasant and harmonious relations now existing between us may always prevail. We salute the American Philological Association with assurance of our genuine esteem and devotion.

It was thereupon

Resolved, That this Association express its thanks for the friendly message sent through Professor Fairclough by the Philological Association of the Pacific Coast; and that it request Professor Fairclough to convey the cordial greetings of his Association to the affiliated organization.

On motion of Professor E. K. Rand it was Voted, That the President of the Association appoint a Committee on Medieval Latin, with power to enlarge or change its membership.

That at the next meeting of the Association a round table session be held on Medieval Latin subjects provided this session does not interfere with the general programme of the meeting.

The President then appointed the following members of the Committee: Professors B. L. Ullman (Chairman), C. H. Beeson, Cornelia C. Coulter, H. R. Fairclough, K. P. Harrington, G. D. Kellogg, D. P. Lockwood, E. T. Sage.

The following resolutions were introduced by Professor W. A. Oldfather:

Resolved, That the American Philological Association would profoundly regret the suspension of the Thesaurus Linguae Latinae, an enterprise of incomparable value for all phases of classical scholarship, and earnestly hopes that means may be secured in some quarter to insure its completion within the next decade or two.

Resolved, That in case it should be found necessary and feasible for American scholars to coöperate in or to direct further work upon the Thesaurus, the American Philological Association stands ready to assume its share in such coöperation or direction through the appointment of scholars to represent it upon such a coöperating or directing board or committee.

Resolved, That in case a condition such as contemplated should arise, the President of the Association be authorized to make the necessary appointments.

The first of the above resolutions was adopted and the others were referred to the Executive Committee with power.¹

¹They were later adopted by vote of the Committee, on the understanding that the Association was not thereby committed to any financial obligation.

On motion of Professor John A. Scott the following resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the American Philological Association felicitate Professor E. G. Sihler on the completion of seventy years, so many of which have been devoted with singular fidelity to the highest ideals of scholarship; and join with its congratulations the hope that he may still live many happy years and that he may often be present in future meetings of our Association to encourage and to inspire our members.

The remainder of the session was devoted to the reading of papers.

JOINT SESSION WITH THE INSTITUTE AND THE AMERICAN HISTORICAL ASSOCIATION

The societies met at 2.30 P. M. in the Lampson Lyceum, the President of the Institute presiding. The entire session was devoted to the reading of papers. About 150 people attended.

III. ABSTRACTS

1. The Colonization of Greek Poetry (annual address of the President of the Association), by Professor Francis G. Allinson, Brown University.

Greek poetry from Hesiod to Aeschylus was examined to justify the usual generalization that it is full of the salt sea; to indicate the progressive local expansion of its domain; and to hint at its legacy to other times. Specific details were drawn from the recurrence of sea-epithets; from simile and metaphor; from actual descriptions of the sea and sea-business; from the peopling of the sea by myth; and, finally, from the actual numbers of places, islands, and sea-board sites — expanding from the Aegean to the furthest reaches of the Midland Sea. Oceanus, from Homer to Pindar, belongs to the realm of fancy outside the Gates. The mise en scène is set in the Aegean and the Mediterranean.

In the poetry examined personal equations differ. Hesiod and Sappho, for example, are landlubbers; the Homeric Hymns, Archilochus, Alcaeus, Pindar, Aeschylus, etc., are redolent of the sea.

Oceanus intrudes upon the Aegean finally in the Clouds of Aristophanes, who transmits to Shelley the divine ichor.

2. The Significant Name in Herondas, by Professor J. C. Austin, Colgate University.

An investigation of the nomenclature of Herondas the mimographer has yielded the conclusion that, in general, the technical requirement of the significant name (redender Name) is observed. Many names are so employed as to be etymologically appropriate to the individual characters, such as: Gyllis, bawd (< $\gamma\acute{\imath}\lambda\imath\sigma$, 'glutton' or 'traveller,' by-name of Herakles); Battaros, pander (< $\beta\acute{\alpha}\tau\alpha\pi\acute{\imath}\zeta\omega$; cf. $\beta\acute{\alpha}\tau\alpha\lambda\sigma$: $\kappa\acute{\iota}\nu\alpha\delta\sigma$); Lampriskos, schoolmaster (< $\lambda\alpha\mu\pi\acute{\rho}\sigma$, suggesting vigorous action with reference to the flogging scene); Kottalos, truant schoolboy (<Aeol. $\kappa\acute{\o}\pi\tau\omega$ or $\kappa\acute{\o}\tau\tau\omega$, 'die'); Kydilla, maid-servant (< $\kappa\hat{\imath}\delta\sigma$ or $\kappa\acute{\imath}\delta\sigma$); Gastron, a pot-bellied, gluttonous, lecherous slave; Kerdon, cobbler (< $\kappa\acute{\e}\rho\delta\sigma$ as fixed by word-plays, 7, 34, 37, 74); Drimylos and Pistros, slaves and salesmen (< $\delta\acute{\rho}\iota\mu\acute{\nu}\sigma$, $\pi\iota\sigma\tau\acute{\rho}\sigma$); Psylla, Megallis, and Anna, maidservants (<ψύλλα, μεγάλη; cf. Hebrew Hannah, Carthaginian Hanno).

Others were chosen for traditional, literary, ethnological, or theological associations, such as: Bitinna, jealous of her paramour (hetaira-name, perhaps <βία); Pyrrhies ('red-head,' a Northern slave, big, clumsy, stupid); Threissa, maid-servant (ethnicon); Thales, Persian turned Greek; Kynno (<κύων); Koritto, Myrtale (hetaira-names); Metriche, Metrotime, Metro (< the magna mater); Kokkale (<κόκκαλος, poma Cybelae).

Many characters other than the dramatis personae bear appropriate names, derived either from the etymological meaning, such as Matakine (Persian name, or possibly <μάτη); Gryllos (<γρυλλίζειν); Mennes, champion boxer (<μένος); Euthies, Kokkalos, and Phillos, teacher's pets ('Frank,' 'Sweet,' and 'Dear'); Batale, daughter of Myttes ('Lisper,' daughter of 'Dumb'); Antidoros, pistor (Headlam: 'Mr. Tit-for-tat'); Euboule who betrays a secret (significant per antiphrasin for the ironical effect); or from literary, proverbial, or theological associations, such as Mandris (< Mandros, a god of Asia Minor); Pataikios and Pataikiskos (typical thievish parasite); Myllos or Myellos; Philainion, Myrtale, and Sime (hetaira-names); Daos, clever slave; Batyllis (with bad connotations, as Batale and Battaros); Nossis and Erinna (Crusius: "eine litterarische Bosheit"); Mikion, humble tradesman (<μικρός).

3. On the Meaning of 'tollere' and 'suscipere' as Applied to Infants, by Professor Harold Bennett, Lebanon Valley College.

It is frequently stated that tollere and suscipere, when applied by Latin authors to infants, refer to a Roman practice of laying a newly-born infant on the ground, in order that the father might 'raise' it, and thus signify his acknowledgment of parenthood and his desire to have the child reared. If one seeks ancient authority for this alleged custom, he will find convincing evidence that the Roman child was placed on the ground soon after birth (Ovid, Trist. iv, 3, 46; Plin. N. H. vii, 2; Suet. Aug. 5, Nero, 6), but nowhere any direct assertion that the father was expected to take it up, or any clear information regarding the significance of the practice. The explanation cited above seems to be a Renaissance conjecture, for it can be traced back to notes by Gronovius on Plautus, Mil. 294, and Lambinus on Plautus, Amph. 501.

A re-examination of the evidence, however, leads one to doubt the accuracy of this interpretation. Not only can one find passages in which it is the mother who is to 'raise' the child (Plaut. Truc. 398; Ter. Heaut. 571), but in some cases the action evidently takes place without the father's knowledge or consent (Ter. Heaut. 626–627, Hec. 576). In no case do we find any such phrase as tollere ab humo, nor is there anywhere an instance of tollere or suscipere in juxtaposition with a reference to the custom of placing the child on the ground. The only passage in which both 'putting down' and 'taking up' are mentioned is in Augustine (Civ. Dei, IV, 11), and there the verb is not tollere or suscipere, but levare.

It is suggested, therefore, that the idiom under discussion does not mean 'to lift,' but is to be connected with another common connotation of tollere and suscipere, namely, 'to undertake,' and that the explanation of the custom of placing a newly-born infant on the ground must be sought in an entirely different direction.

4. The Grapheum of Tebtunis and Cercesuchon Oros, by Professor A. E. R. Boak, University of Michigan.

Papyrus No. 622 of the Michigan Collection is a roll which contains on the verso the ἀναγραφὴ γραφ<ε>ί(ον) Τεβτ(ύνεως) καὶ Κερκε(σούχων) Ὀρ(οντος) of the last four months of the second year of Tiberius, i.e. April 28 to August 28, 42 A.D. The ἀναγραφὴ is an ἀναγραφὴ συμβολαίων, or register of contracts. This register contains 247 entries made according to a fixed formula with a notation in the left-hand margin of the month and day upon which they were drawn up. The following types of contracts are registered: (1) 136 ὁμολογίαι, agreements; (2) 50 μισθώσεις, leases; (3) 27 δάνεια, loans; (4) 17 συγγραφαὶ τροφίτεις, alimentary contracts; (5) 14 πράσεις, sales; (6) 3 συγγραφαὶ διδασκαλικαί, contracts of apprenticeship. The general formula for the entries was: ὁμολογία (or μίσθωσις, etc.) δεῖνος (καὶ ἄλλον or ἄλλων) πρὸς δεῖνα (καὶ ἄλλον or ἄλλους) διαιρέσεως (or whatever the subject of the contract might be). The συγγραφαὶ διδασκαλικαί alone are not entered according to this formula but as the following example illustrates: ἐξέδετο Τασωούκιος πρὸ(ς) Ὄρον δίδασκαλικῆ(ς). It is suggested that ἐξέδετο is here a stereotyped verbal form used as a noun upon which the genitive form Τασωούκιος depends.

The recto of the same roll contains lengthy abstracts of the first fifty of the contracts entered on the verso. This shows that the Grapheum maintained two types of registers: (1) a register of the titles of contracts, and (2) a register of abstracts. The former type has not hitherto been known; the latter has some fragmentary parallels.

5. The Gratitude of the Gods, by Professor J. W. Hewitt, Wesleyan University.

Not only must man be grateful to God, but God owes gratitude to man. This is expressed with some clearness in Herodotus, 1, 87 and 90, Bacchylides, 3, 37, Hippocrates, περὶ Ἀέρων, 22, Aristophanes, Thesm. 1228, and Plato, Laws, 931 A. In addition there are discussed numerous passages, which, while not specifically demanding gratitude from the gods, do request or demand some favor, in consideration of worship rendered. The first instance is Iliad, VIII, 39.

Why does man thus expect return from his gods? The deity may be conceived of (1) as constrained by an act of sacrifice; or (2) bound by a promise, (a) explicit or (b) implicit, due to his having accepted a vow or a propitiatory offering. Or the return may be considered (3) an act of justice or (4) an act of enlightened self-interest. Or, finally (5), the god may desire to make return to his worshiper. These motives continually overlap, but a dash of the element of desire is necessary before there can be any question of gratitude on the part of the gods.

The development of the notion that God owes return to man is sketched from the stage where man sets aside the fetish, if it does not do for him what is expected of it, through ancestor-worship to such higher acts as the vow. Man is always convinced that he should receive return. He will not serve God for naught. But as he comes to recognize his own duty to be grateful, he thinks of what is due him from God in terms of his own moral advance. This assumes an affinity between God and man that was foreign to the Hebraic element in the Christian religion, which at this point prevailed over the Greek elements and reckoned man at his best an unprofitable servant and incapable of doing God any favor or earning his gratitude.

6. The Subjunctive ἦν in the Papyri, by Professor Robert C. Horn, Muhlenberg College.

In several passages in the New Testament, certain uncial manuscripts read ἦν for ἦ in the third person singular of the present subjunctive (e.g. A in I Cor. 16, 4). While these may be simple errors, due to the tendency to add ν movable, the form is found in papyri also; in certain phrases ἦν seems to be the natural form with the common people. The private letters and official documents of the published papyri have been examined. The results have been checked against Moulton's, who called attention to many instances (Class. Rev. xv, 38 and 436, and xviii, 108; Grammar of N. T. Greek, I [Proleg.] 168; II, § 86). A characteristic example is Pap. Oxyr. 744 (1 B.C.): ἐὰν ἦν ἄρσενον ἀφες, ἐὰν ἦν θύλεα ἔκβαλε.

The papyri in which ἦν occurs date from the first century B.C. to the fourth A.D. It occurs much more frequently in private letters than in official documents. Most letters in which it occurs are written by ignorant or uneducated people, as the spelling and syntax show. It occurs mainly in conditional and relative clauses, where the phrase probably became fixed (ἐὰν ἦν, ἐὰν δὲ ἦν, ἐὰν ἦν δὲ); even in relative clauses ἐὰν ἦν is prominent. Fifteen papyri have ἦν in conditional clauses; there are three examples of relative clauses; four of purpose, introduced by ἵνα; and three temporal.

Other peculiar subjunctive forms are ἦσαν (Pap. Oxyr. 1157, Pap. Tebt. 333) and ἦσθα (Pap. Hib. 78, third century B.C.).

There was great confusion in later Greek between the imperfect indicative of εἰμί and its present subjunctive, because of the similarity of form and sound. There was also a strong tendency to add a parasitic ν (Mayser, Gram. d. gr. Pap. 191-194, 197-199). ἦν seems to be established as a subjunctive in popular speech, due to ignorance and confusion.

7. The Repeated Lines of Vergil, by Nicholas Moseley, Yale University.

The paper endeavors to show that Vergil repeats lines not as a Homeric imitator, but with a definite artistic purpose. A study of ninety-five repetitions of three feet or more indicates that the repetitions in the Aeneid are conscious and that they recur under similar circumstances. Nine classes are outlined: (1) lines describing people repeated to describe the same people; (2) lines repeated to describe different people; (3) lines repeated to describe like actions or reactions of characters; (4) lines repeated to describe the same or similar objects or situations; (5) lines repeated to describe the same natural phenomena; (6) lines repeated to describe the opening and close of speeches; (7) repeated prophecies; (8) bona fide descriptions repeated as similes; (9) phrases repeated for special effects.

The repeated lines are generally exceptionally fine ones and they gain force from the repetition. When there are two similar descriptions and a line is repeated from the first one, Vergil is inclined to omit specific details in the second instance, trusting to the reader's being reminded of these details by the repeated line. Furthermore the repeated lines, especially those describing the same characters, help very greatly, together with the prophecies, to preserve the unity of the poem.

The study of the repeated lines may in one or two specific instances give important evidence of incompleteness or lack of polish. Moreover such a study furnishes the best criterion for judging the authenticity of the challenged lines among the iterata. It also indicates the relation of certain manuscripts of Vergil and may give valuable assistance in determining the authenticity of some of the poems in the Appendix. These questions are to be dealt with in a later paper.

On motion the report was accepted and referred to the Auditing Committee.

The appointment of the following committees was announced by the President:

Nominating, Professors Schilling, Nutting, Johnston.

Auditing, Professors Elmore, Bruce.

Social, Professors Hart, Richardson, Tatlock.

The Secretary's report consisted chiefly of statistics of membership for the past year, and notice of the election of 36 new members.

It was moved and seconded that the Nominating Committee be made permanent, one member to be elected each year. By vote of the members present further consideration of the motion was deferred until Saturday morning.

The report of the Nominating Committee was read and accepted, and by vote the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, C. G. Allen.

Vice-Presidents, A. P. McKinlay, B. O. Foster.

Secretary, A. G. Kennedy.

Treasurer, W. L. Schwartz.

Executive Committee, the above-named officers and R. M. Alden, R. Schevill, E. A. Wicher, C. Paschall.

The Auditing Committee reported that the accounts and vouchers of the Treasurer were correct and in order. On motion the report was accepted and approved.

The Association then voted that the Nominating Committee shall consist henceforth of three members, shall be appointed by the President, and each member shall hold office for three years, the respective terms of office to expire in successive years. In case of the absence of any member of the committee from the annual meeting, the President shall fill the vacancy with a temporary appointment. To initiate this system, the incoming President shall select two members from the Nominating Committee of the present session and add a third, indicating the terms of office of these members as of one, two, and three years.

On motion a vote of thanks was extended to the University Club for hospitality and the Treasurer was authorized to pay $10 to the "Christmas Box" for the waiters of the Club.

It was also voted that the President be authorized to appoint each year certain members whose duty it should be to carry to the American Philological Association and the Modern Language Association of America the greetings of the Philological Association of the Pacific Coast, the choice to be made from those members likely to be in attendance at the annual meetings of the Eastern associations.

By motion the President was authorized to appoint a committee of three to represent the Association and assist it in keeping in touch with the movement started at the last annual meeting of the Modern Language Association of America for the promotion of the study of Medieval Latin literature. It was further voted that the Philological Association of the Pacific Coast recommend the appointment of Professor E. K. Rand as the American representative on the committee having in charge the publication of a new Medieval Latin dictionary.

Professor R. M. Alden called the attention of the members to the desirability of coöperating with and supporting the Modern Humanities Research Association.

The attendance at the four sessions numbered 50, 50, 40, and 38 respectively.

III. ABSTRACTS

1. A Possible Origin of Duodecimal Counting, by Professor Clarence Paschall, University of California.

Besides the decimal system, based on ten and preceded probably by the beginnings of a system based on five, we have in the Indo-European languages, as well as elsewhere, surviving traces of a method of counting in which twelve and six play rôles corresponding to those played by ten and five.

The six-twelve system, which seems to be older than the five-ten system, must also have originated in some form of digital counting. How could primitive man have counted six fingers? It is generally assumed that man began to reckon with collective units before he had gone far in counting by ones. He thought of a hand of objects — i.e., as many objects as he had fingers on one hand — before he realized how many fingers he actually had. Then in counting he might easily make six if he returned to the little finger from which he started and counted it twice. That it is natural to make this mistake in counting in a series in which one returns to the starting point is shown by the familiar fact that in French and German the week is thought of as containing eight days. The French count a fortnight in the same way as fifteen days. The Roman method of counting the days in the divisions of the month reveals the same principle. With the development of a more rational notion of number, the error in counting the fingers of the hand was no longer made, and the six-twelve system gave way to the five-ten system, to which, from a mathematical standpoint, it was not inferior.

The following abstracts are those of papers presented at the Conference on Medieval Latin Literature and its Relations (see Programme, page xxii).

2. The Relation of Medieval Latin Literature to Classical Literature, by Professor Max Radin, University of California.

Medieval Latin Literature is no more a debased and corrupt copy of classical Latin Literature than medieval Latin is of the language of Cicero and Caesar. The literature of the Middle Ages is a natural development, a means of satisfying the needs of a society fundamentally different from that of the Roman Empire. The classics were known and valued, but, except for form, they were copied only when rhetorical practice was intended. The ideas of medieval society were ideas of religion, philosophy, history, and law, and in these fields, medieval Latin produced worthy and adequate works. In belles-lettres, poetry and fiction grew up, having for their subjects whatever evoked a strong emotional appeal. For poetry, that was chiefly — but by no means exclusively — mystic religiosity. This new poetry, further, developed a new form, the rhyming verse.

The value of this literature as compared with Greek or Latin or any given modern literature will be variously estimated. The important thing in connection with it is that it was independent and specially adapted to the society whose life it illustrated.

3. The Relation of Medieval Latin Literature to Medieval Vernacular Literature, by Professor E. C. Hills, University of California.

Till about the eleventh century, the literature of Western Europe was almost exclusively in Latin. In the immediately following centuries an outpouring of literary works in the vernacular speeches — epics, lyrics, didactic poems, fabliaux, romances, farces, etc. — stimulated Latin and made it more productive. The medieval Latin literature and that of the vernacular speeches traveled together and each influenced the other so that neither can be understood without a knowledge of the other. Poets who wrote in a vernacular speech would take their material from medieval Latin works, and if a poem in the vernacular was excellent, it was often put into Latin, so that all might read it, for Latin was still the universal language of Western Europe.

The same or similar metrical forms were developed in Latin and in the vernacular speeches (see the Carmina Burana and the Cambridge Songs), and farces were given by clerics sometimes in the one language and sometimes in another. The medieval Latin chronicles were used as material for epic poems in the vernacular (see Bédier, Légendes épiques), and the medieval Latin tales found in the collections of exempla were used in French fabliaux and in Italian novelle (see Crane's Jacques de Vitry).

Without a reading knowledge of Latin and some acquaintance with the medieval Latin literature, no one can do thorough work in linguistics, in prosody, in the modern literatures, in history, or in philosophy.

4. The Relation of Medieval Latin Literature to Modern Literature, by Professor W. H. Briggs, Stanford University.

The importance of a first-hand knowledge of medieval Latin literature to the student of modern literature may be most readily understood through observing the fact that various important kinds of intellectual activity of the Middle Ages were directly continued into the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries and thence into later times. English writers of those centuries, whatever subject they dealt with, were constantly making use of medieval Latin writers in theology, history, science, law, etc., and it may be said with truth that a knowledge of a considerable amount of this medieval Latin writing was widespread among men of learning. From another point of view, it can be said that neither the thought nor the art of a writer like Spenser can be well understood without some knowledge of medieval life and thought, in obtaining which a direct, even if not extensive, acquaintance with medieval Latin authors is indispensable. For instance, Holiness and Chastity in the Faerie Queene illustrate the intrusion of Christian and medieval ethical ideals into the Aristotelian scheme of the virtues. In the same way, 'romantic love' in modern fiction can only be comprehended in its relation to both life and literature by studying the medieval conditions out of which it sprang. From a third point of view, the important influence upon poetry, drama, and other forms of literature of a medieval writer like Geoffrey of Monmouth can only be appreciated after obtaining a speaking acquaintance with him.

5. The Work and Plans of the Section on Medieval Latin, of the Modern Language Association of America, by Professor J. S. P. Tatlock, Stanford University.

At the meeting of the Modern Language Association in 1921 there was successfully organized a permanent group of those interested in medieval Latin and its relations with ancient, medieval, and modern literature and with medieval culture in general. The group has been working since with Dr. George R. Coffman, professor of English in Grinnell College, Iowa, as its executive secretary; the honorary general chairman is Professor E. K. Rand, of Harvard University, and the chairmen for the East, Central Division, and West are respectively Professors G. H. Gerould (Princeton), G. R. Coffman, and J. S. P. Tatlock (Stanford), who also form the executive committee of the group. The organization is likely soon to be expanded. Among the tasks undertaken are a list of those in America who are working on these subjects, in secular and church institutions and elsewhere; a survey of what the universities are doing for the study of medieval Latin culture in the widest sense; a consideration of what can be done to advance such studies; coöperation with other learned societies. One result of the activities of the group already is the editing of an anthology of medieval Latin by Professor C. H. Beeson, of Chicago.

The study of medieval Latin has suffered in America through being nobody's business in particular. There is still a widespread feeling that the language and literature are so inferior as to be negligible, and a surprising inattention to the fact that till the fourteenth century Latin was almost the only literary language of the best-trained minds, and till much later conducted the main current of intellectual progress. Many have retained the sentimental and distorted idea of the medieval mind which began in the eighteenth century; and the important middle division of man's intellectual history is still obscured by paradox and misunderstanding as well as by ignorance.
